DSRM Cable Construction, Inc. recently purchased a new HAMM HD 12 Tandem roller from Nixon-Egli Equipment Co. Shown here patching asphalt in El Monte.

DSRM Cable Construction, Inc. (DSRM) was established in 1994 by Dan McNulty in order to serve cable and phone companies throughout Southern California. They have built a reputation as a visionary company, dedicated to developing, building and maintaining state-of-the-art HFC telecommunication networks, with the most advanced engineering, designs, construction, and technical services available.

Part of DSRM's day-to-day activities requires that they open asphalt roadways in order to repair or maintain existing communication utilities. Patch and paving work is necessary after the job is completed and good reliable rollers are needed to compact the new asphalt surface. DSRM recently purchased their first HAMM roller from Nixon-Egli Equipment Co. "We have depended on Nixon-Egli in the past as a parts supplier for our asphalt grinding equipment, so when the need for a roller arose, we decided to take a look at what they had to offer," says McNulty. After reviewing the competition and comparing features and options, DSRM decided on the HAMM HD 12 Tandem Roller. "First off, these rollers are comfortable and easy to operate, especially with the ergonomically optimized driving positions that are available," says McNulty. "We were also impressed with the excellent visibility, low profile positioning, high compaction force and low center of mass. We were thrilled to get such a high quality roller at such a reasonable price point."

DSRM is headquartered in Pomona and they have built their company by developing trust with their clients through professionalism, knowledge and experience. "We deal with Allen Hahn from Nixon-Egli and he has earned our trust by always following through with what he says he is going to do," says DSRM. "We have had a great experience across the board, including Nixon-Egli's parts and service department. They have a great team and we will continue to trust and do business with Nixon-Egli Equipment Co."
